

Hobbeast — Üzleti kérés összefoglaló

Verzió: 1.29.0 Dátum: 2026-09-05

One photograph became the whole library

The events page asks what you feel like, not what you can spell.

The hero showed the same badminton picture to everyone, for ever, which quietly told every visitor that this is a badminton site. It now draws from all 132 editorial clips — a different one on every visit, rotating every nine seconds while it is on screen. Nothing is fetched before the hero is visible, playback stops when it scrolls away, and a viewer who asked for reduced motion gets one still frame that never moves.

Categories lead, typing is the fallback

The free-text box was the first thing on the page, which only helps someone who already knows the name of the thing they want. The filter card now opens with Mihez van kedved? — the five busiest themes in the catalogue as one-tap chips, counted from what is actually loaded, so the shortcuts follow the supply rather than an editorial guess. A subcategory replaces its parent when it holds most of the parent's programmes ("Túra" beats "Sport & Mozgás" when nearly everything under it is a hike). The search box moved below and got smaller.

Three filters that answer real questions

Már vannak résztvevők — somebody has already committed: a participant on a Hobbeast event, or a companion plan on an external programme. Szezonális — a programme that names its season AND happens while that season is on, judged by the programme's own date. Both halves are required, which is why December does not make a cinema screening seasonal and "karácsonyi" in July does not count either. Ten Hungarian windows from farsang and busójárás to advent and szilveszter; the chip names what is currently running. Közösségi programok — what falls apart alone. A football match needs two sides, a board game night needs players, a partner dance needs a partner, a group hike IS the group. A concert or an exhibition does not qualify however sociable it feels: one person with one ticket has a complete evening. Each match carries the reason it fired, shown on the card as Csapatos program.

Measured against the live catalogue, which is where three of the rules came from: a performing band ("Dúros Zenekar") is not a team activity, "kultúra" folds to "kultura" and must not be read as "túra", and a title that plainly says stand-up overrides a category that says board games.

Fixed

The events route chunk went over its size budget with the new filters, so the create-event form — the heaviest thing on the route, and invisible until the button is pressed — is now fetched on demand. The route fell from 128 KB to 67 KB, well inside budget.
